STYLE, LAST UPDATE | POLICY | HN Business is an online magazine created for professionals and social media enthusiasts that is focused on helping its readers to access high quality information about the latest trends and best business practices in the crypto community. Our editorial team works hard to find the most interesting and relevant content for our readers. The first part of our series focused on questions you might have when you first start investing and trading in cryptocurrency. This time, we take a closer look at the intricacies of one of the most unique aspects of cryptocurrencies and blockchain technology: smart contracts. What is a smart contract? What are the differences between an asset (stock, bonds, fiat) and a payment (debit card, credit card) What are the differences between a smart contract and a contract Imagine that you want to buy a car. And you see an advertisement online that says "This Chevrolet Aveo is brand new and comes with a warranty. We will sell it for only $12,500." You may wonder: "Why is the car available for sale at such a low price?" If you're lucky, you might receive a telephone call from the seller in which he explains to you that you have got a good deal on the car because a few days earlier a very similar car came up for sale at an even higher price. That is how the sale of the car works. This process is called a Real-Time Internet Business Transaction or RTITB for short. In an RTITB, the seller does not have a fixed price for the goods, as in a traditional contract. Instead, the price is determined through market dynamics. That's why RTITBs are sometimes also referred to as "open market" contracts because they are based on an open (global) market. The Open Market Solution Open market contracts have been around for a long time. Back in the Middle Ages, car dealers used to operate on the same principle. A car dealer would drive from town to town and offer customers a car for sale at a given price. Customers would then come up with an offer and decide together what was most beneficial. Based on the proposal made by the majority of customers, the car was sold for that price. Today, open market contracts are only used in a few countries for something like a currency (for example, in the Scandinavian countries or in Germany) or for the monet

The Pen Tool is very similar to the Brush Tool. Instead of painting with a brush, you can use the Pen Tool to draw. The Pen Tool allows you to draw free-hand lines and paths. The Pen Tool is very useful for creating shapes, creating drop shadows, adding text, and much more. You can adjust the size, color and other properties of lines and paths you create by moving your cursor. The Magic Wand or Magnetic Lasso is an extremely useful tool for quickly selecting specific portions of an image. For example, you can select an area in one layer or an entire image, or just a particular color in an image. Once you've selected an area or layer, you can use the selection tools to further edit or manipulate it. The Content-Aware Feather or Healing Tool helps you with problems like red eyes, missing parts, and additional objects in your image. You can manually adjust the healing amount. You can also use the healing tool to quickly heal a misshapen face or remove a scar. The Content-Aware Feather is also very useful for retouching images. For example, you can use the Content-Aware Feather to remove small objects like leaves or hairs from a person's face. For more info on the Brush and Pen Tool tools, see:We already went over the NFC and AFC Championship Games with our latest update, but there are still a few big games to put to rest. The NFC is down to the Green Bay Packers vs. Carolina Panthers, the Kansas City Chiefs vs. San Francisco 49ers and the Minnesota Vikings vs. Atlanta Falcons. The AFC Championship games are Arizona vs. Denver and Baltimore vs. New England. Both games end at 4:25, and the games are wild, fast-paced and exciting. Let's get to the games now. NFC Championship: Carolina Panthers (13-3) at Green Bay Packers (13-3) This is a late game and a great matchup. The Packers and Panthers look like two of the best defenses in the league. How do we know this? It's because the only offense on either team ranks in the top 10 in yards and points per game. That's what allows them to have 13 wins. That's why they are in the conference title game. Last week, Green Bay was able to push through some red-zone mistakes and
